WUSD seeks to buy homes at school site

(Editor's note: due to a production error last week, a copy of the wrong news article ran with the headline for this story. Below is the story that should have run last week. Apologies.)

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

The local school district is closing the deal on nearly a hundred acres of land near Jefferson Boulevard and Linden Road for a planned new high school. But it is also trying to acquire seven residential lots totalling about eight acres that are surrounded on three sides by the proposed school, and which front along Jefferson.

Recent concept drawings for the campus show the homes in the path of the proposed school's main entrance across from Higgins Road.

Buying the properties and their houses would make the high school simpler to design -- including providing space for the school's planned new entrance at Higgins and Jefferson. Washington Unified doesn't particularly need more raw acreage for the school, said Denny Jones, the district's director of facilities planning and construction.

"It's more of a desirability issue," said Jones. "We're interested in talking to any and all of those folks that reside (on those lots) on Jefferson, and we have sent them a letter."

One affected landowner provided a copy of the letter to the News-Ledger.

The letter references the 3,000-student capacity of the next-door campus and the square footage of the planned buildings. Then it says "the District is willing to discuss a voluntary purchase of your property at fair market value and would like to know if you want the District to make an offer to purchase it at this time."

With the school wrapping around the lots -- most of which are inhabited -- "those lots become islands," Denny commented. "We would have to plan around them."

> 'If the property owners are not interested in selling, and the school district is not interested in acquiring them by 'eminent domain,' we'd have to build around them.'
> --WUSD representative

The district's architects have shown a site plan of their evolving concept for the 3,000-student school. That plan -- published in the News-Ledger three weeks ago -- assumes the purchase of those lots.

"If the property owners are not interested in selling, and the school district is not interested in acquiring them by 'eminent domain,' we'd have to build around them," Jones commented.

'Eminent domain' is the legal process by which an agency such as the school district could force a property owner to sell, at a price -- often litigated -- that reflects "fair market value."

Is Washington Unified looking at using eminent domain to force the sale of these homes?

"We don't have any comment to make on that right now," said Jones. "That would be a school board decision, and they have not made that action. They have not indicated that it is the direction they want to take."

Jones said that the campus plan does not include placing any actual school buildings on what are now homesites, so a failure to be able to buy the private property "would not affect the placement of the buildings."

Touchdown

Full details weren't available at press time, but one fire department source reported unofficially that the weather phenomenon caused "high wind conditions" when it struck. A van was reportedly damaged by a falling tree branch, and a street sign may have also been toppled. No injuries were reported.

State Senator joins staff at RCHS, helps seniors fill out college financial aid forms

By Daryl Fisher
Features Editor

Flanked by River City High School counselors Chris Tyler and Freda Clark, Senator Deborah Ortiz held up a financial aid workshop sign (see photo at right) at a February 17th gathering at the River City High School Library where about 40 seniors and their parents attended a workshop that helped them sign up for California state and federal higher education financial aid.

"This is a very good program which has allowed over 50% of the seniors who have filled out all the required paperwork to receive financial aid to attend college," explained Chris Tyler. "The grants are directed towards helping some of our seniors who otherwise would not be able to go on to college and I'm thrilled that we were able to offer this workshop. Much of the credit goes to River City counselor Freda Clark, who did most of the organizing of the event."

Also in attendance at the workshop was West Sacramento City Councilman Oscar Villegas, who has been very vocal in his support of RCHS students receiving as much Cal Grant aid as possible.

"This is basically free money specifically directed towards helping students go to college," said Villegas, "and I am very pleased that with the help of this workshop a good number of our very deserving local students will now be able to receive these grants and further their education."

County's financial reporting lauded

Yolo County announced last week that its auditor-controller, Howard Newens, has received a "financial excellence certificate" from the Government Finance Officers Association (GF)A). The award is granted to less than half of the state's counties.

The award was granted based on the county's fiscal report for the year ending in June, 2003.

"This is an award that we are trying to get every year, and we have missed only once in the past eight or nine years," said Newens in a county press release. "The GFOA sets the standards that are critical elements of government accountability. I am very glad to have the staff and the resources provided by the (Board of Supervisors) to meet those standards."

The county's former manager of general accounting, Michele Timko, received a financial reporting achievement award for her involvement in the annual report.

West Sac wishes Rotary 'Happy 100th'

The West Sacramento Rotary Club has been active since 1949 and among its many contributions to the community has awarded over one quarter million dollars in scholarships to local high school students, mentored young people through their Adopt a School program, assisted local seniors with the Meals-on-Wheels program, and raised tens of thousands of dollars for the West Sacramento Christmas Basket Project.

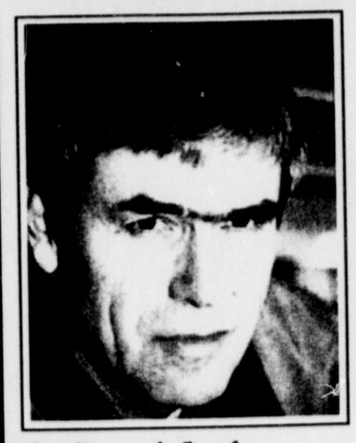

Rotary has over 1.2 million members worldwide.

Should women be allowed to fight in a war?

My Back Pages

By Daryl Fisher

As people who read this column regularly know, from time to time I have heated political discussions (usually on the phone so we don't start trying to strangle each other) with a longtime West Sacramento friend of mine who has a very conservative political point of view. He loves to jerk my chain, as I do his, and some years back, with his permission, I started calling him "Newt" when I quote him in this column, after Newt Gingrich, the very successful (before he self-destructed) former congressman and House Speaker from Georgia who was instrumental in winning back the United States House of Representatives for his Republican political party back in the early 90's.

Anyway, Newt and I were chatting away the other evening when he suddenly was sure that he had finally found something we could both agree upon about the war in Iraq -- other than the fact that we both hope it actually ends someday.

"And just what might that be?" I asked him with interest.

"I think we can definitely agree about the role of women in combat," he suggested.

"What do you mean?" I asked.

"Well," said Newt, "as a Vietnam veteran yourself, I would hope that you would agree with me that there simply is no role for women in combat -- and that they should be staying home and raising their children."

"But what if they don't have any children?" I asked Newt.

"It doesn't matter," he explained. "Women should still never be allowed to fight in a war under any circumstances. You wouldn't have wanted a woman next to you in a foxhole in Vietnam, would you?"

"Well, I guess that all depends," I pointed out.

"I'm serious," said Newt. "A lot of female soldiers have been killed in Iraq and I think that is simply awful. A great country like ours doesn't need to be giving their women a rifle and sending them off to fight in a war."

"But it's my understanding," I said, "that most of the women we have sent over there are doing non-combat duties."

"That may be," said Newt, "but they're still getting killed and it's simply not acceptable. Don't you agree?"

"Well," I said, "as you know, I think it's unacceptable that any American soldier has died in Iraq."

"Just stay on the subject," said Newt. "Do you or do you not think American women should be allowed to be in combat?"

"I'm thinking about it," I assured Newt.

"Well, think about this," said Newt. "You're back in Vietnam -- you suddenly get ambushed -- you're wounded -- you're going to die if you don't get out of there quick -- and the only soldier near enough to help you is a girl. Now how would you have liked that?"

"Actually," I said, "come to think of it, I was in a situation pretty similar to that once, and the only soldier near enough to help was a guy, and he didn't move a muscle until reinforcements got there."

"So, you're honestly going to tell me that you think men and women are equal in a combat situation?"

"I just don't know," I admitted. "I guess it would depend on the particular soldier. I'm sure that in some ways a man makes a better soldier, but I bet that in other ways, a woman would make the best soldier."

"You're just saying that because of all that women's-lib garbage you believe in and because you want to be politically correct," said Newt, raising his voice for the first time in our conversation. "Come on! Be honest! I want a yes or a no! Do women belong going off to fight in a war or not?"

After giving it another minute or so of serious thought, I finally said, "Okay, here is what I think. I think women should be allowed to fight in a war, but only if all the men have to stay at home."

"Now what in the world is that supposed to mean?" demanded Newt, obviously becoming exasperated with me.

"Think about it," I encouraged Newt, who often has quite a bit of trouble thinking outside the envelope, "we would get all the countries in the world to sign a treaty or something saying that when the next war breaks out, only women will be allowed to go off and fight in it."

"And why would we do something as silly as that?" asked Newt with interest.

"Just think of all the lives that would be saved," I said.

"Why would lives be saved?"

"Well," I explained, "because unlike us men, the vast majority of women are much too smart to keep fighting and dying for years and years over things that don't make any sense. Nope, I think it was Woody Allen who said that the hardest part of any war is just getting everyone to show up, and if only women were allowed to be soldiers, we might even rid the world of war altogether, because I bet women would have no trouble at all finding better and much more important things to do with their lives than fight in another stupid war -- and they just wouldn't show up."

Why you would create an 'impound account'

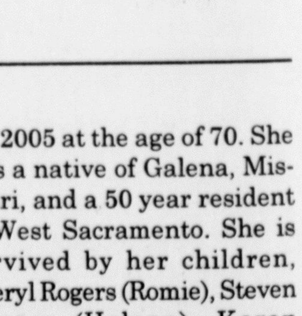

When you want to have your taxes and insurance part of your monthly payment, how does that work? Well you have to first have to determine what is going to be included in your "impounds", (traditionally they are comprised of your property taxes, home owners insurance, and maybe principle mortgage insurance; PMI).

Always your taxes and insurance are paid forward, so you are insured they are paid in advance. Your property taxes are paid twice a year, (Dec., and April), and your homeowners insurance is paid annually. So when we create your impound account we are doing just that, "creating." We have to calculate what your property taxes are, divide by twelve, and then impound for the rest of the months until your next tax bill is due. Depending on the month that you close escrow is significant because each month of the year poses a different "impounding" amount. Your home owners insurance is paid annually, so typically what happens is your old insurance is prorated to the date we close escrow, you then pay the full amount of the new premium, then you add about two months or extra reserves into the impound account. PMI works in many ways the same as homeowners insurance.

So when you refinance or purchase a home, and you are creating an impound account, just remember that you are paying forward all your accounts so that there is always enough to cover your taxes and insurance. At the end of the year, however, most lenders audit all there impound accounts on behalf of all their clients and reconcile their books. In some cases you can be entitled to a refund of overpayment of impounds. Use extreme caution when you get this check. Call your lender right away -- sometimes a lender has sent a refund, then called the next month saying they must raise your impound amount. Usually this happens when either your taxes or your homeowners insurance has increased.

'Hey, isn't that...?'

By Daryl Fisher
Features Editor

While returning home from a family vacation that had taken her on a cruise to Mexico with her parents, Ron and Brenda Morazzini, longtime West Sacramento resident Jeanine Zito recently spotted the lead singer of the well-known music group Black Eyed Peas in the Los Angeles airport.

"My whole family has always loved the Black Eyed Peas," said Jeanine, "and when I saw their lead singer in the airport I was pretty excited. So I decided to go up to him and ask if he would please take a photo with my son, Cody, and his cousin, Amanda. And not only did he agree to the photo, but he even signed his autograph for us."

It turned out that Will.i.am of the Black Eyed Peas was in Los Angeles to perform at the Grammy Awards, where he was a nominee.

"It's really nice to run into someone whose music you have always admired and find out that he is also a very kind and gracious man," said Jeanine. "It was definitely one of the highlights of our vacation."

When Buyers Want to Bargain

You've done everything your agent recommended to make your home look wonderful, and you've cut the price to the bone. Then an offer comes in so low you're offended! Is it possible to reach a meeting of the minds in the face of such an offer?

Even if you're very far apart in dollars or terms, the real distance may not be that great. Your Realtor can help you determine if the buyers are ready, willing and able to carry through the purchase.

If they're qualified, look at you're differences. Make a list of areas where you have some flexibility. You may have to go back and forth several times to make the transaction work. The trick is to be patient -- and not take the process personally!

Two hundred attend opening of local museum

From Louisa Vessell
West Sacramento
Historical Society

Sunday, the West Sacramento Historical Society celebrated the opening of their museum and visitors center – the first museum in West Sacramento. Over 200 peopled attended the opening. At times, those wanting to get inside the museum formed a line that went almost to the railroad tracks.

Many visitors reminisced about growing up in West Sacramento while looking at the photographs and artifacts.

Mark Johannessen, Vice President of the society was the Master of Ceremonies. There were various presentations by Assemblywoman Lois Wolk and Mayor Christopher Cabaldon, who presented proclamations to the society; Nichole Becker representing Senator Michael J. Machado presented a Certificate of Recognition to the the society; Lana Paulhamus, Interim Director of the museum and visitors center spoke to the audience about the future of the museum; Suzanne Hicklin, presented the society with a photograph of President George Washington which will hang in the "school" exhibit; and lastly, Thom Lewis, president of the historical society spoke about model of the steamship "Lawrence," which used to sail on the Sacramento River.

Everyone was thrilled it did not rain so the society was able to display two of their antique fire engines: Old Mary and Yellow Bird. Thom Lewis' daughter, Jillian, flew down from Portland, Oregon to help and participate in the celebration. Shipley Walters, Yolo County's premier historian, was in attendance getting autographs from those society members who were involved with their book, "Images of America - West Sacramento."

City council members Wes Beers and Carolyn Castillo Pierson also visited.

Leonard Ortiz, who grew up in the Broderick area of West Sacramento, lent his bottle collection and many items from when he was involved with the early fire department.

"This was one of the most exciting events to happen in West Sacramento," commented Verna Ellis of the historical society.

"The people hanging around the museum, not necessarily coming specifically to see the museum, were respectful," commented Lopez. "We all became part of a community from all different walks of life. We all shared food. You couldn't distinguished one from the other. This is our home."

Sandra Carter from Sacramento who won a membership to the society said: "The event was well attended. The community if prideful of its history. The reception was multigenerational from young children to grandmothers and grandfathers. Everyone was taking a sense of pride and pleasure in their region."

The museum is located at 325 Third Street between the Avon and Subway shops. Thee museum is be open Thursdays and Fridays from 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m and Saturday and Sundays from 12:00 to 5:00 p.m.

OPINION

News-Ledger Editorial

Shine the light brightly

If you care about local government, you have a good mind, and have a little time on your hands, please don't overlook that little "Local Scene" item on our back page.

The item explains that Yolo County is once again seeking citizens to serve a one-year term on the grand jury. And West Sacramento is typically under-represented on that important body (this year's jury seems to be an exception, with six of 19 members hailing from West Sac -- the same number as from Davis).

What does the grand jury do?

To some extent, it does what it wants to do in terms of sheepdogging local government agencies, pointing out flaws and suggesting ways for improvement. But it also plays a role in analyzing evidence and deciding on indictments.

Having more West Sacramento residents on the jury would help make sure that local institutions -- like the city government, port or school district -- all receive their share of outside scrutiny. That can only help them do a better job.

The light needs to keep shining brightly on public affairs in West Sacramento as well as in the rest of Yolo County.

From its inception a dozen years ago, the annual "State of the City" dinner and address in West Sacramento have proven popular with local movers and shakers. It's a chance to rub shoulders and celebrate city successes. The keynote speech is typically given by the mayor, who talks about what has recently been accomplished in West Sacramento, and what yet needs to be done.

The complexities of the event, however, have always meant that the ticket price is not cheap. At $50 per person this year, a dinner ticket may be out of reach of Joe (or Jane) Q. Public. It has always seemed to some that the State of the City address should be more accessible to all West Sacramentans.

Perhaps there's a more inclusive way to run the event in the future. Maybe the dinner could be held as usual, but the doors could be opened for the "State of the City" talks -- even if it is standing room only, like some kind of a "peanut gallery."

Letters to the Editor

Spend our tax money at home

Lets see if I have this correct. The Sacramento Bee of February 15, 2005, said President Bush is requesting $600 million for building a new embassy in Baghdad, and $717 million to operate the embassy.

Here in the good old U.S.A. Mr. Bush proposes cutting senior and veteran programs, along with over 100 other programs dealing with food stamps, education, and health care. It must be heart warming for these people who will have their programs cut to learn that their money is going to Baghdad instead. Perhaps Mr. Bush could propose a new city hall for Baghdad, too, and take even more money away from programs that help our own people in this country.

There is nothing wrong with the embassy staying where it is now, located on a sprawling palace. Mr. Bush is obsessed with Iraq, and nothing else matters to him.

- 1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 1/2 cup hot water

Preheat oven to 350 F. Spray 2 (12-ounce) custard cups with butter-flavored cooking spray. In a medium bowl, combine baking mix, sugar substitute to equal 1/4 cup sugar, 1 tablespoon cocoa and baking powder. Stir in walnuts. Add milk, sour cream and vanilla extract. Mix well to combine. Evenly spoon batter into prepared custard cups. In same bowl, combine hot water, remaining sugar substitute to equal 1/4 cup, and remaining 1 tablespoon cocoa. Pour about 1/4 cup of cocoa mixture over the top of each cake. Place custard cups on a baking sheet and bake for 30 to 35 minutes. Place custard cups on a wire rack and let set for 5 minutes. Serve warm. Makes 2 servings.

The Coast of Akron
By Adrienne Miller
(Farrar, Straus and Giroux, $25)
Reviewed by Cindy Elavsky

In Adrienne Miller's seductively rich first novel, "The Coast of Akron," the reader gets to explore the eccentric and somewhat disjointed Haven family. To call them dysfunctional would be too much of an undeserved cliché. Dysfunctional families usually can still function on a somewhat normal level, all the while fooling their friends and neighbors. The Haven's don't even try.

Lowell Haven, the father, is most likely in his mid-50s and has been with his lover, Fergus, for more than 30 years. They live in an opulent 65-room Tudor-style mansion in Akron, Ohio. Lowell is a famous artist, known for his self-portraits, who suddenly quit his art five years before. Fergus is independently wealthy, having made his fortune turning inherited land into shopping malls. He is also a socially reserved and shy hypochondriac who is always in fear of Lowell leaving him for someone or something better.

Thirty years earlier, Fergus' ex-best friend, Jenny, married Lowell and together they had a daughter, Merit. For a while, the four of them played house, but Jenny soon left, taking Merit with her. Merit has since grown into a mild-mannered, slightly hippie-ish young women. She is married to an obsessive engineer named Wyatt and is helping to raise his young daughter, Caroline.

Merit grudgingly visits her father and "Uncle" Fergus every once in a while, but has slowly been withdrawing from him and his overly eclectic ways. Fergus feels that if Merit would become more a part of Lowell's life, then perhaps Lowell could find his muse again and be able to paint. When Fergus decides to throw a lavish dinner party to lure Merit home, he sets off a chain of events that won't necessarily go how he wants them to.

CRITIC'S CORNER By D.N.A. Smith

"Alone in the Dark"

Running time: 95 minutes
MPAA rating: R

"Alone in the Dark" is, without a doubt, the worst movie of the year. And considering some of the dreck I've had to sit through so far, that's a pretty big accomplishment.

The film stars Christian Slater as an expert on the paranormal who had something bad happen to him when he was a child living in an orphanage. The trauma has something to do with experiments done to him and other orphans by an evil archaeologist looking to unlock the mystery of a portal to a dark world that was opened 10,000 years ago by an advanced ancient civilization.

Aiding Slater is Stephen Dorff, the leader of a secret government agency (whose agents all look like buff Euro-trash supermodel wannabes) charged with finding ancient artifacts from this lost civilization and battling the evil monsters that have been unleashed. Oh, and also on hand is Tara Reid, as ... heh ... another archaeologist who is an expert in decoding ancient symbols.

Casting Tara Reid as a brainy archaeologist makes about as much sense as having Carrot Top play Abe Lincoln. And even worse, she has a sex scene with Christian Slater and she doesn't even get naked — another reason to hate this movie.

The three band together and head off to an abandoned gold mine (which is located UNDER the old orphanage where Slater grew up) to fight the monsters and lock the dark portal forever.

This movie has so many problems I don't know where to begin. Bad script. Bad acting. The editing is so choppy and slapdash, it makes an already convoluted plot and story even more incomprehensible. And the CGI monsters are just plain goofy looking.

Christian Slater

If you have the choice between watching "Alone in the Dark" and actually spending 90 minutes literally alone in the dark, you'd have a more entertaining time engaging in the latter.

A Conversation With John Larroquette

Mike McBride is a former police detective turned defense attorney. He is also the central figure in a new Hallmark Channel Mystery Movie franchise starring multi-Emmy Award winner John Larroquette ("Night Court," "The Incurable Collector," "The John Larroquette Show") as McBride. Others in the cast include Marta Dubois ("L.A. Law") as Detective Sgt. Roberta Hansen, who finds McBride both professionally fascinating and personally "interesting"; and Matt Lutz ("Murder Without Conviction") as Phil Newberry, a techno-wizard whose genius with gadgets often helps McBride deal with sticky situations. The cast also includes Kuma, a smart dog who is McBride's constant companion and who feels that whatever McBride does to find hidden clues, any dog with a good nose can do, and only for the price of bowl of kibbles.

"McBride: It's Murder, Madam"
The Hallmark Channel
Friday, March 4

John Larroquette, who not only stars as Mike McBride in the Hallmark Channel Mystery Movie franchise, but also directs some of the films, says agreeing to play the character was not a problem.

"First, I'd worked with just about everyone connected with the show, including the Hallmark people, and always said I'd be available if they wanted me back. And then when I got the call and read the scripts for McBride, all I could say was — 'When do I start?'"

Larroquette likes the format of airing several McBride films in a season.

"I've done half-hour series, hour series, and they're fine," he says. "But with these films, you have more time to work on scenes or make changes, if necessary. However, as with anything involving television, you still have to get it all done on schedule, so it helps a lot to work with talented people who know what they're dong."

Larroquette says actors don't always like the people they play.

"There are a lot of characters — who, if they were real people — I wouldn't invite to my home for dinner. But as characters, they're often challenging and interesting, and as an actor, enjoyable to play.

"With Mike McBride, he's challenging and interesting, and a joy to play, and he's also the kind of man I would love to have up to the house. I think we'd have a lot to talk about."

Of course, for Larroquette, who is passionate about collecting first editions (he's already saved original McBride scripts in leather folders and says he'll do the same with the books if the series is novelized), his favorite talking points would be about collecting. Except that we don't know yet if McBride shares Larroquette's passion

"No, we don't. But maybe that's something we'll learn later on. Or maybe not," Larroquette says. "What we do know about him is that despite his laid-back style, he's driven by a strong sense of justice, and when he takes a case, it's usually for someone who won't find anyone else willing to do it."

Detective Sgt. Roberta Hansen (Marta Dubois) appears to be attracted to McBride, so might we see a relationship develop beyond the current professional situation?

"There's no doubt that McBride is very much a man who appreciates women," John Larroquette says, "and he enjoys having Roberta around. But I don't think McBride feels he's ready, yet, for any long-standing committed relationship. Still, who knows what will happen down the line."

(The March 4 film, "It's Murder, Madam," is the third in the series, with more to come.)

In Focus

Journalist, television newswoman and actor Rolanda Watts ("Inside Edition") is the host of PAX-TV's new series "Lie Detector," premiering March 8.

"When you cover news as long as I have," Watts says, "you're well aware of what lie detectors are, and you pretty much think you know what they do, and who gets tested and who doesn't. But I never really saw them used, or saw how people reacted when they underwent the tests. However, on the show, I'm present when our polygraph expert administers the tests, and I have to say that I'm often surprised at what actually happens. There were several instances where I felt sure about how (the tests) would turn out, and I was wrong."

Rolanda Watts

Watts says many of the people who come on to take the tests are celebrities or have connections to celebrities, such as Ben Rowling, who is the cousin of J.K. Rowling, creator of the Harry Potter books, and who wanted to prove he is the real-life model on whom Rowling based her young hero.

"Paula Jones also wanted to be on the show," Watts says, "to vindicate herself in the eyes of those who didn't believe her story (of being sexually harassed by former President Bill Clinton)."

Jones says that while lie detector results are not admissible in court in many states, they are in a growing number (of jurisdictions). But regardless, she notes that their value lies in helping to guide defense attorneys in planning their strategy, or in working out disputes between parties.

Would Rolanda Watts voluntarily undergo a polygraph (lie detector) test?

"No. Not at all," she laughs. "I've seen how they work, and I have some secrets I'd rather keep to myself."

DIAL TONE: On Saturday, March 5 (check local listings), PBS will air "Celtic Woman," a performance recorded live in Dublin with four celebrated women singers and a famed woman violinist performing some of Ireland's — and, indeed, the world's — best-loved music.

REMAINS OF MAN WHO COMMITTED SUICIDE NOT YET FOUND

Last Wednesday about 1 p. m., in the neighborhood of the bean warehouse and bean cleaner in West Sacramento, an unknown man was seen by J. H. Brown to wade into the river and disappear.

Brown was gathering driftwood in his boat, and believing the man to be taking a bath, paid little attention to him.

A little later a friend of the bather asked Brown if he had seen anybody in the neighborhood. Investigation proved that the individual had completely disappeared, leaving his clothes and shoes on the bank.

The Sacramento police investigated the strange disappearance as much as possible on Wednesday, but failed to find any trace of the man who had gone into the water. In the clothing, however, they found a card with the name J. E. Kennedy on it. Evidently handed to him by someone at Mary's Hobo Hospital, 146 Guerrero street, San Francisco, the card was signed by Dr. F. J. McCarthy on February 28, 1923.

The man was unknown in this locality and would not have been missed were it not that some friend of his inquired of Brown if he had seen him. A search was being made yesterday, but no trace of the man was found nor any trace of his remains.

DOPE FIENDS ARE STILL PLENTFUL EVEN THOUGH MANY ARE IN JAIL

Of the sixteen prisoners in the Woodland county jail, nearly all are dope fiends or dope peddlers sent up from this section of the county.

All these wandered across the bridges from Sacramento and were arrested by Constable Buckingham and Roy Jones of the State Pharmacy Board.

In a boxcar south of the M street bridge last Tuesday, Buckingham and Jones arrested five victims of narcotics. Of the five, Gus Williams was the peddler of narcotics, and in his possession were found a check book showing a balance of $300, and $95 in greenbacks.

All the victims pleaded guilty and were allowed to leave town except Williams, who was assessed a fine of $95 and 90 days in jail.

The others left town as soon as they were liberated.

While the others acknowledge they were dope fiends, the proof against them was not final. Needles and spoons were found in the boxcar with them, but were not in their possession at the time of their arrest. The only charge that could be placed against them was that of vagrancy, but as they promised to leave town they were allowed to go.

GREAT ACREAGE OF BEANS PLANTED IN HOLLAND DISTRICT

CLARKSBURG, Yolo Co., June 23.—With pinks as the predominating variety, 5,000 acres of beans are being planted this season in the Holland Land Company tract west of here. Other principal varieties are bayos, red Mexicans, and whites. The trend toward diversified farming is being further indicated by June budding of peach seedlings to apricots and various varieties of cling peaches and in the cultivation of several asparagus nurseries.

The Fourth of July committee in Stockton has refused the Coo Coos permission to enter a float in the parade.

The Bryte Extension Club held its regular meeting Wednesday night at the home of E. C. White. A resolution was adopted to drop from the membership rolls those who are delinquent in the payment of dues and of shares in the town hall. The first dance given last Saturday by the club was well attended.

ELECTION OF NEW BOARD OF TRUSTEES FOR RECLAMATION DISTRICT NO. 900 AUGURS WELL FOR LAND OWNERS

At the election held in Reclamation District 900, or West Sacramento, last Wednesday, June 20, three new trustees were elected by the people by a great majority.

Those elected were J. Peltier, with a vote of 754,345, S. Harbinson 754,345, A. F. Turner 756,865.

The opposition registered a vote in favor of J. H. Glide, 48,917, Lizzie Glide 48,907

Intense interest was taken in this election, as shown by the vote cast at the polling place in West Sacramento. Ninety-four land owners in the district took interest enough in the election to cast their votes, whereas formerly not more than a dozen of the land owners were sufficiently interested to cast their votes.

Each vote represented a dollar's worth of interest in the district.

During the polling there was very little excitement, but the intense feeling was manifested in the deep interest that all the land owners were taking in the election. Some votes were challenged and failed to register because they had not taken proper precautions to equip themselves with the necessary credentials.

The former trustees of the district were J. H. Glide, George Borchers and F. E. Miller.

Following the election the trustees and the representatives of the bond owners remained at the headquarters of the West Sacramento Company to hold a meeting on the following day.

That meeting was called immediately after 12 o'clock midnight of June 21. At the meeting the trustees organized, with J. Peltier as president, A. F. Turner as secretary and C. F. Metteer as attorney.

Action taken by the trustees at this meeting by resolution was the retention of H. J. Winters as pump man for the district.

The election returns were conveyed to Woodland by the three trustees on the night of the election and were filed with the county clerk before midnight of that day.

During the election J. H. Glide remained at the polls accompanied by his attorney, Arthur Houston of Woodland.

On the opposing side Fontaine Johnson and C. F. Metteer also remained at the polls.

TWO SCHOOLS MAY BE PROVIDED FOR CHILDREN OF WEST SACRAMENTO DISTRICT

At a meeting of the taxpayers and residents of Reclamation District 900, held in the administration building of the West Sacramento Company last Tuesday evening, the sentiment was expressed that two school buildings would soon be necessary to house the children of the district.

There has been considerable [illegible] sion heretofore about [illegible] of the Sacramento Rive[illegible] It has been located [illegible] in the southeast corner [illegible] the district to the great disadvantage of new families moving into the district.

Lately the location was changed by the school trustees to be located within 1,000 feet of the junction of Jefferson boulevard and the new road extending to Glide's station.

A bond issue of $3,500 was voted by the taxapayers, and the trustees are about to start construction so that the building will be ready for the pupils when school opens this fall.

J. P. Carrico, representing the residents of Carly Acres and the district adjoining, made claim at the meeting last Tuesday evening that a school building would be necessary in that locality very soon.

From that section there are now twenty-six pupils attending the public school in Washington, which is rather a long distance for little tots to walk in unfavorable weather. Another family is expected to move in there this coming week, with seven children of school age.

It was shown by C. T. Williams, one of the trustees of the Sacramento River School District, that the daily average attendance in that district is 39 and sometimes reaches as high as 44. New pupils expected for the next term will raise the average to 48.

No particular decision was arrived at at the meeting last Tuesday evening, but the matter was placed in the hands of the general welfare committee of the club.

The growth in population in West Sacramento foreshadows a large increase for both schools, so that it seems evident that no other conclusion can be reached than that two school buildings must be secured.

It was decided at the meeting last Tuesday evening that all members of the Improvement Club should pay as dues $1.00 per year, payable quarterly, and that regular meetings would be held at the headquarters of the West Sacramento Company.

G. M. Jones, chairman of the club, requested that the improvement committee take immediate steps to promote the interests of the district in the way of securing more industries for the grand riverfront with which the district is blessed. Several have already located there, such as the great bean warehouse, two large rice mills, and a hop-distributing plant that ships its product to all quarters of the globe. There remains lots of space for other similar industries, and Mr. Jones announced that he would make it his [illegible] interest to promote the se[illegible] of other industries for the [illegible]

Transportation by way of water or [illegible] is fully available, and security [illegible] is absolutely assured to any industry locating in the district.

Those industries now located in West Sacramento are a splendid means of support for the capital city, hiring many men and women who spend practically all their funds with the merchants of Sacramento.

It was decided at the meeting last Tuesday evening that the property owners, insofar as they were able, should interest themselves deeply in the election for trustees to be held next day, Wednesday, June 20.

W. Lewis, representing the Ford automobile factory, and a late purchaser of land in the district, made an extended talk at the meeting.

He claimed to have traveled in every state in the Union and to have been in nearly every large city of the United States, but he had yet to come across a district more favorable for farming with a ready market at hand and ample transportation for the products of the farmer.

Thomas O'Connor was appointed a special committee of one to see that all property owners of the district were present at the election of trustees to be held next day.

and entertainment. Parking is free.

The half-marathon is open to walkers as well as runners, and the course will be open for 3.5 hours (a 17 minute per mile pace). Competitive runners will compete for a $500 prize with merchandise awards for division winners. All runners will receive a colorful long-sleeve T-shirt.

"We think this race will be popular right away as it fills a gap in the local running schedule," said Pat Sweeney, owner of Fleet Feet Sports Sacramento. "There are a lot of runners and walkers who want to challenge themselves with a longer event or might be training for a spring or summer marathon."

Entry fee is $35 for the half-marathon or $20 for the 5K, if registered early. Visit www.ffsac.com/stpatricks or Fleet Feet, 2311 J St. in Sacramento.

This is a classic Cabernet and if it were from California it would probably be $50! The aromas of red berries and spice and cedar are carried through on the palate, delivering rich, full texture. It has a great balance with a finished that seems to go on forever.
